

COSTA PINHEIRO, Cláudio M.A., Ph.D (Rio de Janeiro Federal Univ.) Post Ph.D. (Campinas State University) is a Professor & Researcher of Social Sciences and History at the School of Social Sciences and History, Getulio Vargas Foundation and the Coordinator of Sefhis Programme in Rio de Janeiro. He has a longstanding intellectual investment on South-South theoretical connections and cooperative initiatives involving places like Senegal, Malaysia, Singapore, Japan, Argentina, and especially India and Brazil.

His research interests include sociology of knowledge and epistemological frameworks in contemporary human sciences, with concerns to colonialism, pos-colonialism and aspects of the institutionalization of power, comparing Southeast Asia (particularly India) and Brazil. Recent research projects involve the dynamics of the international scientific production developed outside the hegemonic centers, analyzing intellectual dependency at peripheral contexts in relation to an international academic mainstream.

He has been a Visiting Scholar and/or Professor at the Bukkyo University (Kyoto, 2001-2), the University of Lisbon (Lisbon, 2003), the Center for the Study of Developing Societies (New Delhi, 2005), the University of Delhi (2005) the University of Calcutta (Kolkata, 2005) and at Goa University (Panjim, 2006). He was grantee laureate of CNPq (Undergrad, MA and PhD), Ford Foundation (MA), Sefhis Programme (PhD and other grants) and Fapesp (Pos-PhD). He also participates in editorial board of Global South electronic journal and is a member of various research and scientific associations.